Working with Others

– the greatest resource, the greatest challenge

This CURAM/NAPD seminar seeks to respond to the most requested area of resource by school leaders over the last year – how to work effectively with others even in the most challenging situations. This seminar is building on the highly successful seminars on the Strategic Toolbox held in eight locations over the last academic year. The very practical, innovative and resourceful approach won unanimous positive reviews by participants and this approach will be continued and extended in this upcoming seminar series.

Working with others is at the heart of leadership – it is the non-negotiable aspect of the role that can make or break the educational enterprise in a school community. No issue is more complex and challenging – but also when the people ‘resource’ of the school is fully and positively engaged, there are few limits to what is possible for the school.
